Gary is a partner and co-Head of the Technology. Corporate. M&A Department. Gary is instructed by a variety of clients across a full range of activities in corporate law, with a focus on cross-border M&A and providing strategic legal advice to Israeli and international clients alike.

Over the years, and through his in-depth understanding of the intricacies of international law, Gary has gained the reputation of a leading attorney in the international commercial field. Gary has vast experience in all forms of commercial law, specializing in myriad niche areas. Gary's expertise enables him to provide tailor-made legal solutions to his diverse client portfolio, ranging from start-ups, automotive industry companies, retail businesses, health organizations (public and private alike), cannabis farms and more. Gary advises his clients in a broad variety of legal matters, covering cross-border M&A transactions, agreements with OEM's, joint ventures, financing agreements and assisting Israeli companies in setting up suitable corporate structures for their international activities. With many of his clients, Gary provides innovative legal multidisciplinary advice. For example: incorporating expertise in privacy issues related to healthcare and life sciences with international commercial agreements, all in a seamlessly professional and highly responsive manner. These complex transactions, as well as the vast experience held by the attorneys in the department, are the key factors to the high growth rate the department is experiencing in recent years in an ever-increasing competitive market.

Notably, Gary advises Israel's largest Health Maintenance Organization ("HMO"), Clalit Health Services, which is also the second largest HMO worldwide, with approximately 36,000 employees, some 4.7 million insureds and which operates 14 hospitals and hundreds of clinics nationwide. Such advice encompasses a multitude of disciplines ranging from "traditional" corporate advice through administrative and regulatory issues raised by health care providers and insureds, including public health, health-care administration, supplementary health insurance, legislation and regulation; and culminating in the innovative fields of medical equipment and devices and utilization of big-data.

Gary was nominated European corporate lawyer of the year in LMG's Life Sciences Awards 2021, and his healthcare and life science practice has been shortlisted twice (2021 & 2023) for the Israel life sciences firm of the year award.

In addition, Gary is a Legal500 leading individual in the fields of Healthcare and Life Sciences, and is also noted in the Commercial, Corporate and M&A and the Intellectual Property practices.
